The U.K. Singles Chart Number Ones.
From the 10th March 1960 the chart used nationally in the U.K. was compiled by "Record Retailer". This was a trade publication as used by record shops and the music industry which later became "Music Week". The choice of this chart as the one used for "official" purposes is slightly unfortunate, because in just about EVERY other national chart "Please Please Me" was number 1 (and therefore the Beatles FIRST number one).

The Ultimate List Of The Beatles UK No.1s - Smooth

Though obviously superfluous to long-time Fabs faithful (who may also find themselves quibbling over the precise definition of "No. 1 hit" and the exclusion of seeming contenders like "Please Please Me" and "Strawberry Fields"), newly arrived visitors from the Pleiades star cluster and other neophytes will find it a concise and generous (nearly 80 minutes) single-disc introduction to the band's career-spanning, unparalleled dominance of pop music in the 1960s and beyond.
